[FREE] A Christmas Carol of the Living Dead

A Christmas Carol of the Living Dead

Rebecca Brock : A Christmas Carol of the Living Dead before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Christmas Carol of the Living Dead:

The Charles Dickens' classic gets the mash-up treatment in this updated version of "A Christmas Carol." Ebenezer Scrooge's London is now about to be overtaken by the undead, protected only by a crumbling Wall. He is visited by three Spirits, who try to make Scrooge realize his responsibility to those around him...and his part in creating the madness that surrounds them.

About the Author Rebecca Brock is the director of a small rural library in southern WV. Author of the horror collection, "Abominations," she has been published in several horror anthologies, including "The Best of All Flesh," "History is Dead" and the indie best-seller "Brainchild: A Collection of Artifacts." She is the co-writer of the Student Academy Award nominated short film, "Stephen King's The Road Virus Heads North" and a devoted fan of horror movies, scary books, and all things zombie. Somehow in the midst of all the zombie madness, however, she found the time to write a sweet Christmas romance titled "The Giving Season" (from Pearlsong Press). Brock is also the author of several short stories that can be found for the Kindle, including "Sweeties," "Snuffed," "Believe," and "A Wish for Christmas."
