Aisha, that tries to save the desert. Aisha lives in the Sahara Desert. Aisha learns about the animals in the desert a young age. She teaches the people in her town about the desert, and how to respect the animals that live there. She soon got a job helping the animals get new land to live on. Also she helped making preserves for the Ibexes. The Ibexes are tall, white, hooved, and almost extinct. When I was reading this part of the story, I imagined Llama like creatures at a preserve. Aisha once helped prevent a flood in the Ibex's preserve, by helping to build a sandbag dam. Aisha counts cranes that fly through the Sahara. This story is extremely interesting. If I met Aisha I would ask her many questions. One might be, "How do you enjoy helping the animals in the desert?" I think it is excellent to be helping the environment at an early age because you will probably continue helping the animals for the rest of your life. If you did a book report on this story you would most definitely get an A. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Acting for Nature By A Customer This is a great book, which should be in every elementary/middle school library. It gives bios of ordinary kids who through extraordinary effort started a project to save the environment.
