In its lyricism and rich detail, this collection of sixteen meditations is very much in the tradition of Joseph Wood

Krutch's The Desert Year. In the author's knowing hands, the desert landscape of the American Southwest and northern New Mexico is lifted into the realm of magic: shamans float in the arid air and flowers bloom blindingly bright after a desert rain.

About the Author John Brandi is a poet, writer, and artist. He is the author of thirty eight books of poetry and nonfiction. His work includes In What Disappears and Heartbeat Geography. He continues to teach, as he always has, apart from the academy, as an itinerant scholar and lecturer.
